THE DECATUR DAILY REVIEW.

VOL. III. DECATUR, ILL., TUESDAY MORNING, MARCH 8, 1881. NO. 750

SPRING 1881!

Is fast approaching, filling the heart of everybody with joy: Nature is casting off her gloomy garments to exchange them for bright colors, compelling mankind to follow suit. As a gentle reminder,

B. STINE, the "Boss Clothier" of Decatur,

Opens this Spring's Season with an IMMENSE LINE OF

Men's, Youths,' Boys' AND Children's

CLOTHING!

IN ALL COLORINGS. LATEST STYLES IN PATTERNS,

As well as novelty in cut, suitable for all conditions of mankind, selected with the greatest of care as to perfection in fit, durability in material, as well as suitable trimmings, and substantial and artistic workmanship, bought for cash, which simply means that we buy where we please, and not as some of our competitors, where they can, thus giving our customers the benefit of the very lowest market prices for first-class clothing.

To substantiate this fact, we guarantee, as heretofore, every garment we sell as represented; we guarantee the price; we guarantee the quality; and in each and every case where a customer is dissatisfied with his bargain, we refund the money cheerfully.

In connection with our clothing department we carry an immense line of

GENT'S FURNISHING GOODS!

HATS, CAPS, TRUNKS, ETC.

A hearty welcome to all, is the greeting of

B. STINE,

The "Boss Clothier," Central Block, Old Square, Decatur, Ill.

DECATUR REVIEW.

S. S. JACK.

BLAINE will be the commanding figure in the new administration.

THE Chicago Times calls the present Illinois legislature "an army of asses."

HAYES drew his salary in advance. An exchange wonders if he drew pay in advance for the veto.

THE receipts of Sarah's entertainment at Springfield, on Friday night last, footed up nearly $1800.

THE Indiana legislature adjourned on Saturday, but has been convened in extra session to meet this evening.

THE late speeches of Dillon and Parnell are making quite a stir in England. The passions of the English against the Irish are becoming much intensified.

THE Kansas legislature has adjourned. The only measure attracting any attention, passed during this session, was the prohibition bill. It is very stringent in all of its details.

HON. EDWARD MCPHERSON, of Pennsylvania, for many years clerk of the house of representatives at Washington, will be assistant postmaster general, instead of Tyner, not wanted.

WHAT peculiar fitness has Hon. Levi P. Morton for the diplomatic service in Paris? But we forget! The service does not amount to much. It is all a mere matter of form and salary.

SOME of the Ohio men are unhappy because Charley Foster is not in the cabinet. They should be comforted with the thought that considering his abilities, he has received largely of the honors of this world at the hands of his party.

THE Jacksonville Journal says: "The republican majority in the Illinois legislature is large enough to allow them to unseat one of their own number and give the place to a democrat who received more votes."

This is a tacit admission that if the majority had been small the republican that was not elected would have been seated.

AMONG the numerous Illinois placemen reported in Washington, the status of Gen. Moore is not yet definitely fixed. If men like Steve Hurlbut can be sent to Mexico, and "Long" Jones be made U. S. Marshal at Chicago, certainly the General should get a nice soft place. But fitness does not always win in politics.

HON. MAT. CARPENTER, who died about the time Mr. Hayes went out of the presidency said four years ago last month:

"I do not appear for Mr. Tilden, but for ten thousand legal voters of the state of Louisiana, who, without accusation or proof, indictment or trial, notice or hearing, have been disfranchised by four villains incorporated in perpetual succession, whose official title is the Returning Board of Louisiana."

THE Jacksonville Journal whose editor is one of the most pronounced prohibition men in the country, when the republican party is not in the way, has the following about Decatur: "No city in the state talks more prohibition 364 days in the year than Decatur; but another city election has been held, and the result, as last spring, is in favor of license, and the democratic party. The council stands four for temperance and six for license, with a license mayor."

THE Indianapolis Journal, the organ of the Hoosier republicans, sings out of tune about the new cabinet. It talks cranky enough for a grumbling democrat. It says: "It is a respectable cabinet, but not a great one. The greatest man in it is Senator Blaine, and from him it tapers down by regular gradation to a small point. It is a disappointing cabinet. It is an attempt to compromise geographical claims with political difficulties; an effort to arrange party preference by the distribution of party patronage. The cabinet, as a whole, does not rise above mediocrity. Senators Blaine and Windom are the only two men in it of really national reputation. The rest are mere make-weights. It can be said of them that they will fill their positions respectably, and this is all. They are fair second or third rate men, and only a charitable judgement could say as much as this. The cabinet in its present composition does not compare with the original cabinet of Hayes, which contained Mr. Evarts, John Sherman, Gov. McCrary, Carl Schurz, and Dick Thompson. The composition of the new cabinet is such that the country will be justified in waiting to ascertain the principle on which it was composed, if there be any underlying principle in its composition.

CHARLEY FARWELL is in Washington fighting Logan in the federal appointments for Chicago. The love these worthies have for each other can be measured in less than a pint vessel.

MANY of the eastern papers are in the dumps over the appointment of Windom to the secretaryship of the treasury. They fear that he will represent the people instead of Wall street and the banks.

IF General Steve Hurlbut should receive the Mexican mission, will he agree not to trade in cotton? Cotton saved Andrew Jackson at New Orleans, but too much cotton gave Steve an unsavory reputation.

A Sad Ailment.

Atlanta Constitution.

General Garfield has been made a Doctor of Laws. This was one of Grant's troubles.

Parting Words.

Chicago Times.

Will it be Rutherford's parting advice to James Abram—"Be sure and get your pay in advance, my boy?"

Going Back on Grant.

(Sedalia Democrat.)

The Globe-Democrat expresses the belief that Garfield will not see Mentor again for eight years. That looks like going back on Grant for a third term.

About the Size.

Cincinnati Times-Star.

It may be said as truthfully of President Hayes as it once was of another eminent executive, that he went in with a great deal of opposition but goes out without any.

An Object of Pity.

(Ottawa Free Trader.)

May the good Lord pity the poor man who imagines he must vote a tariff tax on his bread and clothes to keep up his wages! Let him first solve the problem of lifting himself by the straps of his boots.

A "Bigger Man" than Hayes.

Chicago Times.

The Adamses, Charles Francis the elder, and Charles F. the junior, and John Quincy, head the invitation to Carl Schurz to go on to Boston and be endorsed at a dinner. Oakes Ames' sons join, as does Henry W. Longfellow. Mr. Schurz feels that it's a glorious indorsement. No one is inviting Rutherford to bring on his remains to a dinner anywhere.

Look Here!

Ashby & Andress have still on hand ratan chairs, camp chairs, parlor sets, pier glasses, and a lot of superior cooking stoves, all of which are to be closed out at cost, to make room for the goods they are manufacturing. It will pay you to call and see them.

Notice.

Peter Perl, the undertaker, has removed his residence from West Wood street to the building two doors south of May's grocery store on South Main street. Calls by night or day will receive prompt attention. Mr Perl has recently purchased this property and will improve it for his permanent home. tf

UncleTom's Cabin.

A city paper speaks thus of this ever poular play, as given by Draper's mammoth combination:

Notwithstanding that there was next to no announcement, Draper's "Uncle Tom" company had an audience of 500 people at the matinee yesterday afternoon. The evening performance was attended by an immense crowd, fully two hundred being turned away. Somehow or other the story of "Uncle Tom" has a fascination for the people. The cast last night was almost entirely changed from that the company had on its last appearance here, and "Topsy," in particular, was immense. The company plays again this evening.

O Yes! O Yes! O Yes!

Can any person show cause why I should not sell to the public three thousand dollars worth of groceries during the next thirty days; let him now object thereto, or henceforth hold his peace

E. B. Pratt, each day in the year,
Sells his groceries far and near;
And those who come and his groceries try,
Say they're the best that they can buy:
At prices too so very low
That back again they're sure to go.
The best of teas, coffees and spice,
Best canned fruits and California rice,
Nice fresh crackers, and apples sound,
Butter and eggs all the year round.
The "nickel counter" can't be beat,
Useful things you there will meet.
And everything else in groceries nice.
All of them, too, at the lowest price,
Now when you want any thing good to eat
Call at the grocery on North Church street.

CAUCUS RESULTS.

The Republicans Make a Kick Against Organizing the Senate Before They are Ready.

The New Cabinet Officers Have all Qualified but Lincoln, who has Just Left Chicago.

Narrow Escape of the Ex-President and Party.

BALTIMORE, March 5.—The train bearing the ex-president, which was to have left Washington at 10 a. m., did not start until nearly 1 p. m. The president and party had just lunched, and were following it with some conversation upon the events of the preceding day, when a crash came, about twelve miles from this city, at Severn. It threw Mrs. Hayes, Mrs. Col. Bullock, and Mrs. Herron, of Cincinnati, and two or three other members of the party, who were seated in the front of the car, to the floor. President Hayes, discovering at once the true cause of the shock, hastily inquired after the condition of the members of the party, and finding them not seriously injured, sprang from the car and made his way up the muddy bank and through the blinding steam to the front, where lay the wreck of the engines. There were three killed and nine wounded.

A special train was sent by the company from Baltimore, and the ex-president and party reached here at 5:30 p. m. They leave for the West at 11 o'clock.

[The Mrs. Herron mentioned above is the wife of Hon. John W. Herron of Cincinnati, who is a brother of Mrs. Jos. Jack of this city. Mrs. Herron and Mrs. Hayes have long been intimate friends.—ED.]

Results of the Caucuses.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The caucus committee report will maintain the old committees as far as the changes will admit. Bayard will be chairman of the finance committee; Davis, of Illinois, judiciary; Johnson, foreign relations; Jones, of Florida, public lands; Slater, agriculture; Cockrell, military affairs; Hampton, mines; Groome, pensions, and the other principal committees will have the same chairman as before. Several of the new democratic senators will get chairmanships.

The republican caucus in the forenoon discussed the organization, and agreed it ought to be postponed until all the vacancies are filled. After the senate adjourned, the republican caucus again met, and it was stated positively that the democrats determined to go ahead with the organization.

This intention was severely criticized as taking an unfair advantage, and the republicans determined to reorganize when their vacancies are filled. It was stated that the new senator to succeed Carpenter and the Cabinet Ministers would all get here by the last of next week, and it was agreed that the republicans oppose any organization before then on the extra session.

XLVII CONGRESS.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Immediately after the reading of the journal Senator-elect Mahone, of Virginia, was sworn in, subscribing to the modified oath. He took his seat upon the republican side.

On motion of Senator Pendleton the senate adjourned till to-morrow.

The Secretary of War.

CHICAGO, March 7.—Robert T. Lincoln, the newly appointed Secretary of war, leaves to-morrow morning for Washington to assume the duties of that portfolio. His wife, who is a daughter of ex-Senator Harlan, of Iowa, accompanies him, and their three children will follow in a few days.

South Africa.

DURHAN, March 7.—Dr. Barber and Dr. Dyas, while being escorted from Transvaal to Orange Free State, were fired upon by the Boer escort after they reached Free State. Dr. Barber was killed and Dr. Dyas wounded. The affair was similar to the murder of Captain Elliot.

Ireland.

LONDON, March 7.—The Times' Dublin correspondent has reason to believe the government will not scruple to arrest the leaders of the agitation as well as nonentities. Brennan, secretary of the Land League has arrived in Dublin.

Qualified.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—With the exception of Lincoln, all the new cabinet officers qualified this morning at the executive mansion before Judge Carter. They will take charge of their respective departments this afternoon.

Waiting for an Apology.

The Republican of Thursday last said:

Both morning papers on Wednesday made glaring misleading errors in the figures giving the result of Tuesday's election, and the public was at a loss to know exactly how the election did go until the Republican was issued. No corrections were made in either paper this morning.".

And on Friday added:

"And still the two morning papers fail to publish the official majorities of the late city election, and their readers are groping around in the dark as a matter of course; but, as old Uncle Joe says, "It's no odds" to Republican readers, as they perused the official figures, giving the result on Wednesday afternoon."

The returns as declared last night, and which are published in the proceedings of the council show that the REVIEW was correct in everything except the majority for mayor, which was 20 instead of 28. The Republican reported it to be 30, and that of the marshal 17, instead of 27. Will the Republican, which claims perfection, now acknowledge its error? Will it give the REVIEW credit for being right in everything but 1 vote, and say it was wrong in both cases wherein it criticised the REVIEW. The whole matter is of no especial consequence, only to give the Republican an opportunity to "acknowledge the corn."

A Liberal Donation.

Elder Jackson desires to return heartfelt thanks to his numerous friends of Fairview and vicinity for the liberal donation of $41.50. This is over three quarters the gift of ladies and gentlemen not connected with any religious denomination, on whom the Elder acknowledges no claim by way of pecuniary renumeration. Mr. John Rainey, with his characteristic generosity, was the prime-mover and the indefatigable worker in the presentation.

He Shot Himself.

A little shooting affray occurred in Dan Jones' room on Saturday, in which Will Close was both the shootist and the victim. It seem that, for some purpose, Will had drawn his pistol, and it was discharged, lodging the ball in his own leg. As we learn the case there were four persons in the little affray, in the course of which the shooting occurred, and all claim that the shooting was accidental. We don't understand that Will's wound is a dangerous one.

A Card of Thanks.

We wish to return thanks to the many kind friends who ministered so attentively to our dear one, during her sickness, and to the family at the time of her death.

DIED.

At Greenfield, Greene county, Ill., on Monday evening, at 5 o'clock, Mrs. Hannah Wingate, for many years a resident of this city.

The deceased was born in New Hampshire and at the time of her death was 87 years and 4 months old. She leaves a family of four, two sons and two daughters, Thos. H., living here; Charles, in Chicago; Mrs. Mary Dimond, Brighton, Ill., and Mrs. Eliza Marshall, at whose home she died at Greenfield. She was, during almost her entire life, a member of the Methodist church. The many friends of her children here will sympathize with them in their affliction. Her memory will be kindly cherished. The remains will be brought here for burial, though the time has not yet been fixed.

How the organs do chime in an indorsement of Hayes' veto! During the consideration of the funding bill they were strangely silent, waiting to see whether Simon would say "up" or "down."

If as Hayes says, the funding bill was against the interests of the national banks, what will become of them when the country is ready and anxious to pay its bonds, must the country have a perpetual debt just to favor the banks?

Hon. Proctor Knott of Kentucky will long be remembered for his facetious speech on the metropolitan city of Duluth, on this barren shore of Lake Superior. He lately won another laurel. An appropriation of $10,000 for the cotton worm was under consideration in congress and he proposed that if the bill passed that the money be all invested in turkeys. He said that he believed that a good healthy turkey gobbler would destroy more bugs than any entomologist he had ever seen. The appropriatons was not made.

General Hancock attended the inauguration, and was a great center of enthusiastic observation. The Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Republican, writing of the closing hours of the senate, says:

"When the senate was called to order, Senator Thurman stood up for prayers with only one or two republicans and Vice-President Wheeler, the two men going out of public life, the Ohio Senator to be greatly missed, the vice-president to be forgotten. Soon the senators took their seats crowded together on the left side of the chamber. Many old friends sat together for the last time, and in the row were sitting David Davis, Roscoe Conkling, Allen G. Thurman, Hannibal Hamlin, all of them close friends, but the ceremonies were the funeral of the public lives of the last two. Farther along was Eaton, whose honest face was grave with the thought that gathering years made it improbable that he would ever sit in the chamber a member of the senate. Senator Kernan sat behind, the only useful senator New York has had for many a year. He is happy at the thought of his release from public cares, and smiles and chats with his neighbors. Back of the senate sat a knot of eager men, of whom Eugene Hale is the centre, who are to take the places of the old men going out. Their prize is just gained; the others have enjoyed theirs to the full. The senators do no business, but as they sit talking and joking, a burst of applause comes from the gallery. General Hancock has entered at the west door of the chamber and walks around the space behind the desk and comes down the middle aisle. The applause grows louder and louder. Hancock is splendid. In his major-general's uniform, with its broad yellow sash over his shoulders and breast, he seems the perfect type of manly beauty as he walks toward the place which has been assigned him. Conkling is aroused by the applause and looks around. He sees who is coming, and with his customary alertness to be the central figure of a tableaux, he rises and greets Hancock with the most profuse politeness. It is the politeness of a Conkling. Gen. Hancock responds with the politeness of a gentleman. In a moment the aisle is filled with senators pressing forward to shake hands ith the democratic candidate for the presidency. For many minutes General Hancock holds a levee in the senate chamber, and the while the galleries continue the applause. It is the most enthusiastic and notable reception of the day. Soon after General Sheridan enters, but he is received with only a feint outburst, and he and the other army and navy officers make brilliant the republican side of the vice-president's chair."

WASHINGTON CORRESPONDANCE.

Washington, D. C., March 5.—The democratic party has little to reproach itself for in connection with the late session of Congress. It suggested only patriotic and economical measures, and was liberal without being profligate in the voting of the public money. The record when finally made up will be creditable to the party.

That the Apportionment bill failed was the fault of the republicans; as was also such treatment of the subject of refunding as nearly created a panic like that of 1873. By causeless and constant obstruction to the public business a few prominant radicals have, during the past few months, injured their party seriously, while the wise, conservative, patriotic action of the majority has helped to establish general confidence in the leading democrats in Congress.

Speaker Randall's position has been specially difficult, but the same readiness, fairness and lack of partisan bias in his official vote that have so long made him deservedly popular, have been shown through this, his third term, as invariably as ever. The House has never had a better presiding officer.

The supposed appointment of Judge Hunt to a Cabinet place is said to be an arrangement between contracting parties to give Mr. W. K. Rodgers a comfortable berth on the bench of the Court of Claims Judge Hunt was solicited by Hayes to take the place vacated by Judge Woods, so that Rodgers could be thus provided for.

Origin of Dress.

How did we come to possess our present form of dress is answered by a reviewer in Nature. Clothing at first was almost entirely ornamental. The simple cincture was the germ, so to speak, of the clothing we wear. After some time a bunch of pandanus slips was added in front, and this was gradually extended until it made a complete fringe around the body.

When the arts became so far advanced that man could make paper cloth or some woven material, these latter were substituted for the primitive fringe, and the kilt was thus developed. Curiously enough, the dress of the Scottish Highlanders embodies these two stages of progress in the kilt and the sporran.

As man advanced there were inconveniences attending the use of the kilt, which were abated by fastening that garment at one point between the legs, and the human mind was then fairly set upon the path to arrive at the attainment of a pair of trousers.

When the back and shoulders needed protection the savages used the skin of some animal, and it is from this sort of covering for the upper part of the body that we have derived our coats, vests, shirts, etc. But the ancient coat form is even yet retained, not only by such people as Zulu chiefs, but in all robes of ceremony by dignitaries of court and college of the most highly civilized Nations on the face of the earth. The elaborate and varied head-covering of the present day all sprang from a very simple original type.

Those Wives.

In San Francisco and other large towns of California it is said that many of the married women past the middle age, have been the wives of two, three, and sometimes four or five different men, owing to the freedom of divorce which used to exist, and still exists in a modified form, in the State.

Women were not plentiful in the days of the Argonauts, and for sometime after; and when one appeared in the community with good looks, intelligence and magnetism to recommend her, she was well-nigh fought for. As a rule, the women who migrated to El Dorado were not of the finest. Many of them were more or less adventuresses, and seeing their extreme marketableness, enhanced their value by very broad coquetry, and disposed of themselves to the highest bidders. After securing one husband, they entertained proposals for another, and not unfrequently slipped away from No. 1 to No. 2, through some legal trick, before No. 1 had any idea that he had proved maritally unsatisfactory.

It is related that about 1853, three members of a San Francisco firm had each in turn the same wife in the space of 24 months. Some of the most matrimonially enterprising women in the country journeyed thither 20 to 25 years ago, and made their marriages remunerative by getting settlements cash down before the tying of the nuptial knot. The lives of not a few of them would, if faithfully chronicled, read like the most sensational of sensational novels.

How Bees Are Made Harmless.

(Exchange.)

The following contains a valuable hint to those who are obliged to handle bees. The little fellows are sharp strikers when disturbed, but it seems there is a very simple way to take the poison out of them. A gentleman says:

Some years ago I was visiting a family in Sussex County, N. J., where a large number of hives of bees were kept in a yard near the farm-house. The bees were usually cross and belligerent—they would "biz out wi' angry fyke" at any one who approached their yard. On speaking to the old gentleman on the subject, he said they were feeding on the buckwheat, and were full of "pizen," and he would cure them by the time I came again.

On the next day I found the bees quite pacific and quiet, freely letting me come close to their hives. On asking for an explanation of their amiableness, Mr. S. pointed to an effigy hanging near the bee-yard.

He had put this up in the night. In the morning the swaying of the effigy excited the warlike little fellows, and they literally covered their enemy all the forenoon, until all had stung him to their content, and had exhausted all their poison without harm to themselves or others. Verily, knowledge is power.

Work.

[Philadelphia Chronicle-Herald.]

Why shall we exempt the indian from it? He should be made to earn his bread by the sweat of his brow. He will not like it, but he will get used to it, and the next generation, instead of being born to the war paint, will be born to the plow. Work must be part of any successful Indian policy.

Olive Logan is said to be 51. She doesn't say so herself. The Elmira Press says she never did care much for mathematics, anyhow.

SOUTHERN CORRESPONDENCE.

ATLANTA, GA., March 4th, 1881.

EDITOR REVIEW:—Cold, oh, very cold you'd be, if you were down in Atlanta. After three days of very warm weather and riding with car windows open up to 4 p. m. yesterday, I could hardly believe that in a few minutes I could suffer with cold. But I did all the same, and in an hour I could not speak above a whisper. I see about half the people with their throats tied up to-day. I presume the blizard came from that fearful snow storm in the north west. I see by the papers its the worst this season.

The change makes the young garden "sass" look sick.

We had greens the past two days for dinner, and greenland for supper and breakfast.

Some of the prettiest country I have seen is between here and Chattanooga. Part of it is mountainous and part very level, and is now being planted to corn. I saw hunureds of teams yesterday plowing. Nearly all the teams consisted of one little mule or spotted bull, a shovel plow and nigger. The soil is red as blood, but produces well. The wheat is looking very fine, much better than in any place south.

Atlanta is more like a northern city than any place I have been. But one thing is still visible, Sherman's "march through Georgia."

A great many chimneys are standing sentinal like, to remind one of a former home of some one probably prosperous and happy.

There is one thing in particular I notice in all the cities. I never see any girls flirting on the street or hanging out of the windows to make eyes. And I never hear a bit of humor or wit and slang, such as "you bet" and "don't you forget it."

And for the life of me I can't determine whether it is from stupidity or because they are too high toned. But I think mostly from the first cause.

Everything here is very high, so much so that it reminds one of what Lincoln said when first in New York. If you don't know the story step round and ask Frank Hays.

PAST THE MERIDIAN.

Fading a little day by day,
Deeper the curves, grayer the gray;
Dimmer the vision now appears,
As come and go the fleeting years.

Weaker, weaker the trembling frame,
Feeble, feeble, the vital flame;
Memory fadeth a little now,
The human castle begins to bow.

A mist sometimes upon the brain,
Like clouds before the coming rain;
A twilight in the place of noon,
October in the place of June.

Winter earlier than before,
Sterner seems than when of yore;
The world is dull and poor and stale,
And shadows lengthen in the vale.

'Tis sundown now. The day of life
Is ended with its care and strife;
The twilight of eternity
Is breaking o'er the unknown sea.

Near is the sunlight's golden ray
Ushering in eternal day;
Over the mountains, see the light
Like a star of hope in th' wanderer's night.

—[L. L. Hager in Telescope, Dayton

TWO RED ROSES.

The sun was sinking to rest amid clouds of purple and red, and its last rays lingered on the nutbrown hair of Dot Dalton, as she leaned against the rustic gate that led to the old farm-house, where her childhood had been spent.

And beside her, his dark eyes drinking in every change of her lovely face, Guy Winters stood and pleaded for her love.

"Dot," he said, "must you leave us? Are you not happy here? Have we failed to make you contented?"

"Oh, Guy! not happy—not content! How could I be otherwise with the love you all lavished on me—me who had no claim on you, save that our mothers were friends in girlhood. But, Guy, I want to go, I want to earn my own living——"

"Dot, darling, do not leave us. Oh! my love I cannot let you go. Stay with me and be my wife, dearest!"

They had been like brother and sister so long, that Dot never dreamed of the possibility of Guy loving her, save as a brother. "Guy, you cannot mean this," she said. "Tell me you don't mean it."

"Mean it? Oh, my darling! I have loved you for years, but I was afraid to speak. Give me some hope Dot, and I will wait."

"Guy, dear," she said gently knowing it was kind to speak plainly, "I thank you for the love you offer me; but—but —Oh, Guy! I—I love——"

"You love Wilson Audrey?" he said, "I might have known it, for he is all a girl could wish for a lover, but, Dot I have loved you as a woman is seldom loved."

Near to them bloomed a bush of sweet red roses, and the girl put out her slender hand and broke off one brilliant flower.

"Keep this, Guy, in memory of me," she said.

"Give me the rose at your breast," he said, "and I will keep it while life lasts."

She loosened the flower, and as she gave it to him he bent and kissed her.

"We have been as brother and sister in the past, Dot, and in the future we will be the same," and then he turned away. Dot looked after him till Wilson Audrey's voice fell on her ears, and she turned to meet him with glad, welcoming eyes, completely forgetting Guy Winters and his love.

Wilson Audrey had won Dot Dalton's heart, and to do him justice, he believed he loved her when he wooed her, for her rare beauty pleased his senses. He was handsome and the girl whose first love he had won, almost worshipped him never doubting his love, even when she saw the change that passed over his face when she told him she was going to earn her own living.

"I don't see why you need do so," he had said; "the Winters love you as their own daughter."

"You must not forget, that I have no claim on the Winters save that of love."

"But darling you must know what a difference it would make to my family, when they hear you are an underpaid music teacher, and not an adopted daughter of the Winters, and coheir with their son."

A little gasp of pain came from her lips. "Oh, Wilson—Wilson! can it be?" He smiled.

"Sweet," he said, "I love you for yourself alone. You believe this, darling?

She was so true and loyal herself, that when he drew her to him and kissed her she was content, believing he meant nothing by his careless words. The red rose she had first offered to Guy Winters was still in her hand.

"I will take this as a love token" Wilson said, "and if ever the time comes when I love you less, I will send it you, and you will understand." He spoke jestingly; but her face grew grave.

"Wilson," she said, "it might be that in the future you would love me less, and long for your freedom; if that time ever comes, promise me you will send me this red rose, write me no word or line, simply send me this flower."

"I promise," he said; "but as my love will never grow less, you have seen this red rose for the last time." He drew her to him and kissed her. "Goodby my darling," he said, and then left her.

"What will you wear to-night, Miss Leigh?"

The graceful woman turned slowly around, and answered: "I will wear black silk and lace, Meta, with red roses in my breast and hair."

"But your white silk and pearls?"

"I prefer black this evening, Meta," the lady answered, gently, then turned around to the window again.

After sometime she went over to an inlaid desk, and drew out a letter, written in a bold hand, and signed "Wilson Audrey." It was a passionate declaration of love to the beautiful woman holding it in her hand. She read it over, then from beside it she lifted an envelope, directed in the same dashing hand to "Miss Dot Dalton." Opening the envelope, she looked at what she had seen a hundred times before—a faded red June rose; and now, you know that Miss Leigh, whose wondrous voice had made her famous, was Dot Dalton, who had bidden her lovers farewell at the rustic gate, eight years before.

The change in her life had come suddenly—an eccentric old lady had heard her sing, and charmed by the sweetness of her voice, had placed her under the best masters, and two years after had the satisfaction of knowing that her fair protege was fated to be one of the greatest singers in the world. But before all this had come the falsity of her lover and the anguish that nearly killed her, and then the news that the old folks at the farm were dead, and that Guy had sold everything and gone abroad; then her new life began, and people were thrilled by her beautiful voice, and men infatuated with her beautiful face, and when she returned to her own land, foremost among her lovers was Wilson Audrey, who never dreamed of her identity.

There was to be a reception that evening, given in honor of her, and Wilson Audrey would be there waiting to receive his answer from the woman he loved.

There were many fair women present; but Miss Leigh reigned queen, and Wilson Audrey watched her with thrilling pulses, and wondered he ever believed that he loved woman before. He was talking to a grave, handsome man, whose earnest eyes had wandered more than once to Miss Leigh's proud, pale face. Neither of them noticed that a slender, stately woman was leaning against a flower-wreathed column a little distance from them.

"It is good to see you again Winters, after all these years," Wilson said, "and you have come back heart-whole as well."

"I came as I went, Audrey," he said slowly. "Surely you remember I loved Dot Dalton."

"Ah, yes; sure enough! Well, Dot was a pretty little thing. She was——".

"Dot Dalton was the one woman on earth to me," Guy interrupted sternly. "Had I known she was not your wife——"

"Not my wife! No, thank goodness, Winters, I don't mind telling you, but I have met at last the woman before whom my very soul bows down. If wealth and energy can accomplish it, I will marry Miss Leigh, the beautiful prima donna."

"I do not understand," Guy said, "how once caring for Dot, you can love another; as for me, this is more precious than the love of the fairest woman on earth," and he drew a little sandal-wood box from his pocket, and opening it, displayed a faded, red June rose.

"You are romantic, Winters," he said, "perhaps were you to search for your lost love you might find her."

"God would be kinder to me than I dare hope; but if I should find my——"

A sweet, low voice interrupted him, and Miss Leigh stood before him, her eyes glowing, her lips apart, the red roses clustering at her breast.

"Guy—Guy! I am here. God has taken care of me for you—far better than I deserved."

And then, sheltered by the silken curtains, he took her in his arms and pressed passionate kisses on her low, white brow, and smiling crimson lips.

An hour later, when Miss Leigh thrilled the hearts of her listeners, as her voice rang out in the old song, "My darling is tender and true," only two in the room knew how her heart throbbed at the thought, for none save themselves dreamed of the story of the two red roses.

Marrying a Title.

[Albert Rhodes in Scribner.]

The women members of the household are in such a state of beatific hope usually that they would as soon think of haggling with St. Peter about the price of admission within the celestial gates as to challenge that demanded by the noble groom for entrance into them the portals of the new world to which it is his privilege to belong.

After the marriage the American family are prepared to become the friends of the noble husband's family. Calls are exchanged, and politeness is shown to the transatlantic people—a politeness that is unexceptionable. The Americans wait for that expansion which usually precedes intimacy, and as they wait discover that the newly-made countess is being gradually withdrawn from them; that she is surrounded, and that barriers are being erected between her and them. In a word, the parents learn that they have served as a ladder to what they consider a higher social life. The relatives of the new husband have virtually said to him: "Your wife is now one of us, and we receive her, but you have not married her relatives, and we draw the line there."

The young American woman with the natural affection which belongs to her sex, may protest against this virtual separation from her parents, but is trained and amused in such a way that she, as a rule gradually becomes accustomed to it.

The separation does not take place at once, but the visits between mother and daughter become fewer, and then at longer intervals, until finally the mother ceases to enter into the daily life of her daughter. And yet neither the father nor mother can find an act or a word in their brief intercourse with their daughter's new relatives which they can term positively unfriendly or impolite. Everything, in appearance, is smooth and conventional, and an objection is difficult to find.

The American father chafes under this. He would rather receive some act of provocation, give them a piece of his mind and be done with it; but the provocation never comes, and at last he finds it inconsistent with his dignity to hold any intercourse with people who keep him at such a distance, and he will have nothing more to do with them. The mother may still yearn for her daughter, but the aroused father will permit her to make no further visits to the daughter's house; then, only once in a long while the countess comes to them. Thus is brought about what the husband and his family have desired.

DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC

W. P. HILL, Crockett Station, Tenn., writes: "DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC has done wonders here. A lady who had been doctored nearly to death for several years, has been cured of Debility and Great Prostration by the use of DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC, which raised her from her bed, where she had been lying for many months."

Dr. Harter:—Mr. James Brown of our county, has requested us to tender you his grateful acknowledgments for the great benefits his wife received from the use of your IRON TONIC. He tells us that, after having paid three or four hundred dollars doctors' bills, two bottles of your IRON TONIC did her more good than all other medicines she ever used. She was troubled with Derangement of the Womb, Whites, etc., from which she is much relieved.

Wedding Anniversary.

ILLINI, March 4th, 1881.

EDITOR REVIEW:—The 2nd of this month being the fifth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Jere Miller, the friends and relatives concluded to call on them at their home two miles north of Warrensburg, and renew their ties of friendship. The day dawned propitiously and the friends gathered in from the four quarters, and by eleven o'clock their spacious dwelling was crowded with smiling faces old and young. Among those present were the Misses Emma and Katie Lehman, of Decatur, with friends from Warrensburg, Hickory and other points.

Presents in profusion, both elegant and varied, from the most tiny to the most ornamental piece of furniture, which we will not even try to name or describe. Well, after the ladies got through criticising the different articles, and the conversation among the gentlemen became a little settled, dinner was announced and such a dinner it was never our good fortune to sit down to. Oh! such a fine big turkey, deserts, pies and fruits of all description, it was enough to make the most fastidious epicure smile. Well, after dinner the gentlemen took a general survey of the host of fine stock, while the ladies retired to the parlors to talk about, oh, well you know what, and with the glib social entertaining quarters of the host and hostess, all felt the day well and profitably spent, and it was the best wish of all present that Mr. and Mrs. Miller may live long and prosper, and that may not be the last gathering, but that five years from the 2nd of this month may the frends gather again if the turkey be not less fat.

Military Inspection.

According to previous announcement Maj. Vance the 2nd brigade inspector paid Decatur a visit yesterday and inspected the Rifles and Guards of this city the former at 1 o'clock p. m., and the latter at 2 o'clock. The Rifles mustered forty one men, and under command of Capt. Durfee they mace a fine appearance, and evidently made a highly favorable impression upon the Inspector. The Guards under command of Capt Foster mustered between thirty and thirty-five men. They also made a highly creditable appearance, and we shall expect that the Inspector will return at head quarters a report of the Decatur military that will reflect honor upon our boys.

Any ladies wishing to know of the merits of the Excelsior Kidney Pad, its action, etc., are referred to Mrs. Wm. E. McKeehen, photograph parlors, Toledo Ohio.—See Adv.

FORSYTHE, ILL., March 7, 1881.

EDITOR REVIEW:—Great is the change from snow to mud, and we hope to soon see a change from mud to hard terrafirma. Business is near to a stand still in the village. No grain moving, as the wagons cannot get over the roads, consequently we are shut off from the country tradel and as to the railroad, it is about as useless as the wagon road. It is very seldom that we see a train, especially on time. Guess they have lost their time table.

Our enterprizing merchant has neary sold out, and we understand he is about to enter a new business and our town will welcome the new enterprize, which is to be an agricultural store.

Dr. J. W. Dowry is soon to take possession of his new residence and new drug store. He and his partner selected Thursday next for the execution of the articles of agreement. The Doctor will then have 80 acres of land to let.

The post office is at last moved and settled, as I told you some weeks ago the change would be made in order to repay N. G. Benton for his valliant services in behalf of his Lord and Master, J. G. Cannon. But as I before stated, our friend A. G., is too tired to perform the duties, therefore he turned the labor with the honor over to his son Vic. But it happens that Vic is a "chip of the old block," he could wear the honors but the labor was too much for him, and consequently he has employed another clerk. The young fellow arrived yesterday morning.

Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, Mrs. John McKinley has returned from her wedding tour and has been making fashionable calls in the village within the past week.

Owing to the measles our school was closed for several days but is now open again. The measles have made a general sweep here and in several cases has been accompanied with Lung fever, but with good care and the skill of our physicians everyone are convalescent.

Mrs. Theadore Baxter, of Taylorville, is here visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. David Plank, and also Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Mowry.

Four of our enterprizing young men have struck for California. May prosperity go with them,

Elder Jackson gave us two first-class lectures at this place last week, and will preach here on Sunday, 13th, the services to be held at the school house. We have a church here, which was built by the community at large, but all denominations are now excluded except the methodist.

Our township election is near at hand but very little is said about candidates. The only question is; "Can we find candidates who will accept the offices?" One citizen has been spoken of as assessor, and the next day that citizen was hunting for the man who had dared to mention his name. We are in very much the same condition that the old maid was when asked why she did not marry, she said that " those she would have, would not have her, and those that would have her, the devil wouldn't have." Now those we want to fill the offices will not accept. and those who will accept no one wants. We may have to go to Decatur for our candidates, and we know we can take our choice there for there is not an instance on record where a Decaturite ever refused an office.

A fellow who gave the name of Kelly who came in from the direction of St. Louis on Saturday, and who claims that he desired to go on to Chicago was detained here for the want of a train to take him through. On Sunday morning while standing on the depot platform he was accosted by a couple of fellow who claimed to have known him at Stanton. He told them he was never at Stanton and had never seen either of them before. Finally one of them invited him to go home with him to dinner and they started down the railroad track together. When about opposite the beer garden they said to him now we have got you where we want you and we'll give it to you for being a Molly McGuire. On saying this, one of them knocked him down, and then both set to pounding and kicking him, cutting gashes in his face and head, and bruising him up badly. After gratifying their hate for Molly McGuire, they left him to get back to town as best he could. He reported the case to Deputy Marshal Hewes, and described the desperadoes as best he could. He said they made no attempt to rob him. Mr. Hewes thinks he knows who the assailants are. The assaulted man went on his way to Chicago yesterday.

We learn from the Danville papers that street cars in that city have been blockaded as well as here. Ours are all right now and are making "good time for the present. How soon another snow blockade will lay them off remains to be seen.

CITY COUNCIL.

Last Meeting of the Old Council.

Partner Wanted !

I want a partner with at least one thousand dollars to invest in sheep raising in southwest Kansas—the best portion of the United States for the business. A small capital invested in this way before the choice locations are all taken up will insure a fortune. No disease, splendid water, abundance of grass and dry healthy climate.

Sold Out.

Having disposed of my stock in the harness and saddlery business, I desire to effect a settlement with my patrons at the earliest day possible, and this is to notify them that I can be found at the drug store of Walters & Tyler, on the south side of the city park, where I shall be pleased to see my friends. I desire also to say to them that I shall soon resume busines, with a nice new clean stock throughout, embracing every variety of goods in my line of trade, which I shall sell at figures which cannot be discounted here or elsewhere. When again open for business I hope to receive calls from all my former patrons and from hosts of new ones. Respectfully, jan4d&wtf J. W. TYLER.

A Card.

I have an assortment of gas fixtures, chandeliers, store pendents, brackets and globes which I will sell at cost price, to close out the stock.

PERSONAL.

Supervisor Hawkyard was in to see us yesterday.

W. C. Davis of Long Creek took in the city yesterday.

H. C. Mowry. the grain buyer, of Forsyth, paid his respects to Decatur yesterday.

The genial face of Harry J. Pike, of Sullivan, was noticeable on the streets of our city yesterday.

Supervisor Word has been unwell for the past month, but is better and able to attend the meeting this week.

Supervisors House of Pleasant View township, and Rosencrans of Blue Mound were callers at the REVIEW office on Monday.

Brother Jake was in town for a short time on Monday coming in from Nokomis in the morning, and leaving for griggsville in the afternoon. He has engagements for lecturing two months ahead.

A Business Street.

Cerro Gordo street is emphatically the street of manufactories. Begining at Water street, first comes Wayne Bros. carriage factory, then Ashby and Andress furniture factory, then the bagging mill, next the establishment of the tank line Co., then Lyon Gipson & Co's planing mill and sash and blind factory, and then Haworth's check rower factory. All of these establishments are under full way, and are doing a large business. To walk along this street, and call at these places give one a tolerable idea of the importance and magnitude of our manufactories. And then just north of Wayne Bros wagon shop is the large flowering mill of D. S. Shellebarger & Co. Besides these named, which are almost within a stone throw of each other, there are sundry factories in other parts of the city which are also doing a thrifty business and also flouring mills which manufacture annually a large amount of wheat into flour for the market. Decatur people have good reason to be proud of the large and prosperous manufacturing establishments in their midst.

Sarah's Opinion.

A reporter called on Sarah the other day at Springfield and among other things she had the following to say of our Macon county statesmen, when drawn out by the pencil driver:

B. Yes, mon dieu ! I see Mr. Moffeet. He in senate! He one able man, and a nice man, but not fair to look at. He come see me and I much impressed. He should be governor. He will be some day. I never luff him only for his mind, and ability.

R. Have you seen Mr. Rogers?

B. Oh, yes, yes! I see him two times. He have a large head like our once President McMahon, I luff him much for his fine appearance. He not say much, but no matter, he act right. I will long keep him in my mind. Did he speak much he would be great in power with the peoples like Victor Hugo in my own countree.

R. You have met Mr. Durfee?

B. I not like him! He wear a French moostache, but he too cold, too distant, I can never luff such as he no matter how many presents he bring. He may be great man; he may speak sharp words, and make quick repartee, but de ladees never much care for him. He too far away in luff for anyzing. Too cold! Too cold! Just like one great snow bank. But ze Colonel who near ze glass and sit at ze desk, I could luff, but he never come near me.

Here the reporter was suddenly interrupted by the appearance of other visitors, but it was enough.

Enlarging His Borders.

The wagon shop of D. F. Hamsher, on Wood street between Main and Water street, is about to be enlarged, and the brick are already being drawn for that purpose. The present shop is 40x80 feet and two stories high, and the addition on the east side is to be 36x80 and two stories high. When the addition is completed Mr. H. will have 12106 feet of floor room. This addition has been made neccessary by the steady increase in Mr. Hamsher's busin ss.

A Church Destroyed by fire.

On Saturday morning last St. Patrick's (catholic) church of Peoria was destroyed by fire. It was a beautiful church, and new, having been dedicated only last September. The walls remain standing, but the roof and interior, together with furniture and organ are substantially destroyed. The damage is estimated at $15,000, to 20,000, which is nearly or quite covered by insurance.

Changed Hands.

The Nuncio has changed hands and is henceforth to be under the management of Horace Willey and Frank Drake, two enterprising energetic young men who will put their best work into the Nuncio. The paper will as heretofore be devoted to temperance and general news. On retiring from the editorial work, Mr. Ferry has the best wishes of the REVIEW.

Naughty boys had a big time snowballing on Sunday, the snow being just damp enough to make up good and solid. The wonder is that some boys did not go home with a sore head.
